If you miss the rather large dip on Micanopy that was filled and compacted late yesterday afternoon — you might be alone on that one... It gave quite a few residents a memorable jolt. If you're feeling oddly sentimental, there's still a bonus dip over on Glasgow you can check out… though it won't be around much longer either.

On a more serious note, I've attached some photos from the subsurface drainage work to give you a look at what was uncovered. The old pipe was not only broken in multiple areas but appeared to be separated from the time of installation — it should've been one continuous piece, but instead was in multiple sections packed with dirt and standing water. A good portion of that dirt fell out when it was lifted, but you can still clearly see the condition inside.

This section wasn't re-scoped or cleaned during this project, as many of you already know — previous video footage confirmed it was beyond repair, which is why full replacement was always the plan. The new reinforced concrete pipe is now going in.

A big thank-you to everyone who patiently rerouted yesterday during the road closure. The contractor has assured us they'll improve advance notice and detour management going forward.

As always, if you have any questions or concerns about the work being done, feel free to reach out to manager@pshtclub.com.

We are doing our best to be on-site daily to ensure the work stays on track and up to standard.

Cheers,
PSHTClub